Google ChromeQ: JUnit Tests framework for a Extensible Application framework in Android I am looking for best way to Unit test an application framework such a android. Application needs to be well designed and testable and build on top of it. Can you suggest any framework which will help us unit test application framework, and at the same time not cause tests to be hard to write. Like it will not block the android framework development process, rather it will allow to write tests well via TDD etc. Any help is much appreciated. A: I suggest to write an own AOSP framework (apk_module_tests) or use some already written one e.g. diff-modules or android-test-framework-base. The soon to be announced android-test-annotation will likely be a good addition too. I also like automating regression tests at the same time.
